We are the Future of Pro-Israel. We come together as proud supporters of a two-state solution.

We are Americans who believe in democracy and equality. We are Jews who believe that to seek peace is to pursue justice and ensure lasting security.

We believe in our very core in Israel's right to exist as a Jewish homeland and a democracy that guarantees equality to all its citizens.

We fight for an Israel whose people live in security with recognized borders, an Israel living in peace and prosperity alongside a Palestinian homeland where citizens can thrive and build their own country.

We share in the vision of Israel as a homeland for the Jewish people and Palestine as a homeland for the Palestinian people, living side by side in peace and security.

We know that we cannot delay any longer. There will never be a better time, or the right time. There is only less time; there is only now.

That is why we call on the US government to invest all possible resources to help Israelis and Palestinians create a peaceful and secure future for them both and we call out those opportunistic politicians who would jeopardize Israel's future for their own political ends.

WE ARE THE FUTURE OF PRO-ISRAEL. We are the Future of Pro-Israel and we have chosen to stand up for what is right and what is necessary. We care too much to be silent or to indulge in despair.

We believe we serve Israel best when we create the space for an open conversation about its future in our community, amongst and across generations and denominations.

We will be tireless in our efforts. We will go from synagogue to synagogue, Congressional district to Congressional district, house to house, person to person—and we’ll make our voices heard.

We will take action and we will fight for our values.

In the name of our grandparents, and for the sake of our grandchildren,

We are the Future of Pro-Israel. We're calling 2013 “Our Time to Lead.”

We intend to put the political capital we’ve accumulated to work as we press President Obama and American policymakers to make a serious effort to resolve the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

WE ARE THE FUTURE OF PRO-ISRAEL. We are the Future of Pro-Israel and we have chosen to stand up for what is right and what is necessary. We care too much to be silent or to indulge in despair.

DIVERGENT PATH ON ISRAEL HELPS LOBBY GROUP GROW MAY 30, 2012

Jeremy Ben-Ami, president of J Street, said in an interview that “the assumption has always been that to run for office, you have to run to the right on this issue with a relatively hawkish view on Israel and the Middle East — the ‘Israel right or wrong’ position...We’re changing that calculus. We are beginning to organize a very, very large network of people in the middle.”

YOU SHOULD KNOW: SOLUTIONS TO THE CONFLICT MARCH 11, 2012

Up with Chris Hayes hosted a two-hour show about the intricate relationship between Israel, America and the Palestinians. Jeremy Ben-Ami, Rula Jebreal (Newsweek), Jennifer Laszlo Mizrahi (The Israel Project) and Leila Hilal (The New America Foundation) discussed Iranian nuclear proliferation, Palestinian non-violence and the American role in reaching a resolution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

The Washington Post

HITTING REPUBLICANS ON ISRAEL — FROM THE LEFT JULY 12, 2012

“[Illinois Congressional candidate] Tammy Duckworth has firmly embraced J Street and the two-state solution, arguing that supporting it is actually in Israel’s interests. Many Congressional Dems have proven too skittish to engage the debate in the manner Duckworth has, so it will be interesting to see how these ads are received. What this is all about, ultimately, is whether more liberal voices on these issues can break the monopoly Israel hawks seem to think they have on what it means to be ‘pro-Israel.’”

Battle for the Jewish Vote JULY 27, 2012

In a discussion with Matt Brooks, president of the Republican Jewish Coalition, Jeremy Ben-Ami said, “Jews are not a single-issue constituency; they are Americans like all other Americans...In polling, you find that perhaps somewhere around 7 or 8 percent of American Jews make Israel a voting issue. And this effort by the Republican Jewish Coalition to drive a partisan wedge into Israeli and American relations does no service either for the United States or for the State of Israel.”

Political Group’s Money Filtering Into 17th District JULY 20, 2012

“J Street’s interest in the 17th District race is a sign of its growing influence. The PAC is only a few years old, much younger than the other more established pro-Israel groups. But it is beginning to have a larger footprint...J Street says it is seeking to redefine what it means to be pro-Israel, and that doesn’t always mean taking the line of its government. In fact, it says there’s a more nuanced approach in the middle that fits with the American and Israeli people.”

Some Advocates Limit the President’s Options AUGUST 23, 2012

“Some U.S. pro-Israel advocacy groups whose policy positions are now markedly to the right of most American Jews are leveraging decades of political relationships to convince policy-makers that no progress can be made on the Israeli-Palestinian front until all concerns over Iran’s nuclear program are fully resolved. The result is to tie the president’s hands, taking powerful diplomatic options off the table that could significantly enhance multilateral pressure on Iran.”

— Dylan Williams, J Street Director of Government Affairs

Will Mitt Romney’s Israel Trip Help Win Over Jewish Voters in the US? JULY 30, 2012

Jeremy Ben-Ami and Noah Pollak, executive director of the Emergency Committee for Israel, discussed whether Mitt Romney’s Israel trip would sway the Jewish vote in the upcoming presidential election.
2012 saw an avalanche of right-wing groups using Israel as a wedge issue in American politics like never before.

The Republican Jewish Committee pumped over $6 million into ads in battleground states like Ohio, Florida and Pennsylvania that attempted to portray President Obama as hostile to Israel and willing to let Iran obtain and use nuclear weapons.

The Emergency Committee for Israel launched attack after attack painting President Obama as ‘weak’ on Iran, insulting to Prime Minister Netanyahu and worse.

Billionaire donors like Sheldon Adelson made no secret of their motivations in donating multi-million dollar gifts to these groups—striking a blow against any politician who dared to promote active US leadership to achieve a two-state solution.

As the Future of Pro-Israel, J Street fought back.

Starting early in the Republican primary, J Street went after Newt Gingrich, who denied the existence of the Palestinian people. We continued through the general election, supporting pro-Israel, pro-peace candidates who took on and defeated members of what we called the “One-State Caucus:” Allen West, Joe Walsh, Frank Guinta, Bobby Schilling and others who support Israel’s annexation of the West Bank.

We took the pro-Israel, pro-peace message to televisions, inboxes and mailboxes throughout the country through commercials, ad buys, web videos and mail pieces.

All throughout the United States, J Street supporters pushed back against smears and misinformation and proved that J Street would have the back of candidates willing to stand up for Israel’s true interests, beginning with American leadership to achieve a two-state solution.

FACT:

81% of American Jews believe the US should play an active role in helping the parties to resolve the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Source: J Street Election Night Poll of Jewish Voters
The 2012 election cycle was historic for J Street PAC. We distributed over $1.8 million to 71 candidates, surpassing our own record and handily maintaining our status as the single largest pro-Israel PAC in American history. J Street PAC also accounted for 35 percent of the total pro-Israel PAC money distributed to candidates nationwide. Of our 71 endorsees, an astounding 70 won their races, including all 53 incumbents. J Street PAC raised an average of over $57,000 per endorsee in contests categorized as competitive by the Cook Political Report. And 20 out of 21 of these endorsees won their races.

As a result of our successes, the 113th Congress will include 50 percent more J Street PAC-endorsed Members of Congress: 8 Senators and 63 Representatives from 26 states. These pro-Israel, pro-peace champions will be strong advocates for US leadership to achieve a two-state solution.

J Street PAC Endorsees in the Senate and House of Representatives.
“Fighting for a vibrant, thriving and secure Israel has literally and figuratively been the cause of my life. In the late 1990s, I made aliyah and was inducted into the IDF, serving in a combat unit alongside olim from around the world. And in recent years, I have joined Portland’s pro-Israel, pro-peace movement through J Street.

We can see how fractured the American Jewish community is when it comes time to discuss Israel. My own awareness became clear after I suggested to my synagogue’s adult education committee that our temple’s Israel series include a discussion about the future of the West Bank. I was dismayed when the proposal was dismissed as “too controversial.” It is because of our love for Israel that we must confront the real challenges it faces, not avoid them.

Fortunately, our local organizing efforts are yielding results in the face of such obstacles. At a fall 2012 political fundraiser featuring two Portland-area Members of Congress, it was our J Street table that included area congregational rabbis and members of the local Jewish Community Relations Council. And when the discussion turned to Israel, J Street was very much part of the conversation. J Street is increasingly central to the community debate about Israel—not just here in Portland, but around the country.”
We will go from synagogue to synagogue, Congressional district to Congressional district, house to house, person to person—and we'll make our voices heard.

"J Street’s 2012 National Conference showed me the tremendous urgency of achieving a two-state solution. Peter Beinart’s speech about his deep, personal relationship with Israel convinced me of something I thought didn’t exist before J Street. As he spoke about the challenges and sacrifices he was willing to face to ensure Israel remains a democratic homeland, I knew the passion and commitment exist to make the two-state solution a reality.”

From Israeli social protest leader Stav Shaffir (above) to renowned writer, novelist and activist Amos Oz (below), J Street 2012: MAKING HISTORY featured some of Israel’s greatest champions for peace and justice.
The J Street Education Fund sponsored missions to the Middle East in 2012 providing Members of Congress, American public opinion leaders, and students with opportunities to achieve a more complex and nuanced understanding of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. Designed to enhance targeted influential leaders’ knowledge of the region and combat misinformation through first-hand exposure to the peoples and land at the center of the conflict, each of our delegations met with high-level Israeli and Palestinian officials. Notable meetings this year were held with King Abdullah of Jordan, Palestinian Prime Minister Salam Fayyad, Deputy Prime Minister Dan Meridor, senior IDF officials, Ambassador Dan Shapiro and numerous Members of Knesset.

The J Street Education Fund and the Women Donors Network (WDN) co-sponsored a Congressional Delegation of six women Members of Congress along with 14 members of the national lay leadership of both J Street and WDN. Representatives Barbara Lee (CA-9) and Jackie Speier (CA-12) co-chaired the delegation, which also included Representatives Yvette D. Clarke (NY-11), Donna Edwards (MD-4), Eddie Bernice Johnson (TX-30) and Gwen Moore (WI-4). JSEF’s largest Congressional delegation to date, we enriched American political discourse by increasing the number of Congresswomen with the knowledge and skills to promote bold US leadership in the region.

J Street remains committed to confronting Iran’s nuclear ambitions through diplomacy and tough, targeted sanctions. In 2012, as the bellicose rhetoric from the right increased, so did J Street’s work to educate the public and Congress about the dangers of a preemptive strike on Iran. J Street exerted considerable effort to inform the Hill of the overwhelming support among American Jews, Israeli security experts and the public at large for a diplomatic approach to resolving this crisis.

Our lobby team’s Iran-related legislative and policy victories in Congress included playing a lead role in generating support for:

- The Prevent Iran from Acquiring Nuclear Weapons and Stop War through Diplomacy Act (H.R. 4173), supported by 77 Members of Congress, would declare it US policy to use all diplomatic tools available to stop Iran from obtaining a nuclear weapon and require the appointment of a high-level envoy for diplomacy with Iran, and congressional approval prior to a military strike;
- A bipartisan letter to the President, signed by 71 Members of Congress, supported a diplomatic approach to resolving the Iranian nuclear threat; and
- An Amendment to the National Defense Authorization Act, unanimously passed by the House, stating that nothing in the act shall be construed as Congressional authorization of the use of force against Iran.

In an effort to educate Congress and the American Jewish community about the importance of seeking a diplomatic solution to the crisis with Iran, J Street brought FORMER IAF AND IDF COMMANDER DANI HALOUTZ to the US for a week-long tour.

Director of Policy and Government Affairs, Ploughshares Fund

“Iran’s nuclear program poses a serious challenge to international security and Middle Eastern stability. I applaud J Street’s work as a pro-Israel, pro-peace, Jewish organization in educating Members of Congress, the media and community members about the dangers of both a military confrontation with Iran and the importance of using diplomacy to prevent an Iranian nuclear weapon. J Street’s thoughtful, practical and effective message on Iran adds a welcome voice to the mix as we collectively work to assure American, Israeli and Middle Eastern security in the days ahead.”

CAROL WINograd
- Member, J Street Board of Directors and National Finance Committee

“Thanks to the vision, smart, political grit, street savvy and generous investments of our supporters, 2012 was a remarkable year for J Street. Over the past twelve months I witnessed our influence deepen throughout the halls of Congress. Whether working to secure the endorsement of our eight JStreetPAC Senators, or helping to plan our Women’s Leadership Mission (the largest delegation of Members of Congress to date) I saw that we are indeed the future of pro-Israel in America because of the courageous and tenacious leaders in this movement. We refuse to shy away from the tough questions. We remain open to new ideas, and most importantly, we remain committed to creating solutions and re-imaging new political and communal paradigms, together.”
Thank you to our supporters (continued)
